

CoStratify selects Corent Technology to help clients build strategies and plans for digital transformation.

London, 28th August 2020 - CoStratify and Corent Technology today announce their partnership focused on building IT strategies for customers using Corent Technology's SurPaaS® automated cloud platform.

CoStratify are leaders in developing strong ICT strategies and business cases for customers, ensuring decisions are based on evidence and aligned to the business need. At the centre of our mantra of "forming strong evidence for change" is our process and application called CoStratification. This calculates an organisations Total Cost Of Ownership, that analyses customer assets, costs, processes and challenges. We chose SurPaaS® to speed up our discovery process so we can spend more time with our customers helping them to solve the challenges they face.

SurPaaS® is an end-to-end platform that allows leading service providers to take customers successfully through the entire cloud journey. Beginning with assessment and discovery of existing IT systems, SurPaaS® provides feasibility and pricing information for the adoption of cloud services. It then automates migration of legacy systems and provides ongoing optimisation and modernisation once on the cloud to ensure continued best practice and value for money.

CoStratify Co-Founder Andy Yates commented "Corent SurPaaS® has helped us to reduce the time spent on discovery by up to 50%, increasing accuracy and improving the quality of our deliverables whilst reducing the time to deliver. We particularly like how supportive Corent are in the delivery of the tooling and how attentive they are to our particular needs in how we extract, analyse and report on the data that SurPaaS® finds."

Jeremy Neal, UK Manager for Corent Technologies said: "We are delighted to be working with CoStratify, a unique type of partner for Corent with a unique approach and value proposition in the UK market. What is so great about the CoStratify approach is that it provides a fully costed TCO for the existing IT environment - a really solid foundation and start-point for any organisation thinking about adopting and using cloud services"
